

Ted Leisenring, President

It was in 2010 that CRC President Ted Leisenring met CRC's former Executive Director Anne Murphy, who encouraged him to get involved by attending the Annual CRC Awards Dinner and some tree plantings. Ted has been involved ever since. Later, Anne asked for help with fundraising. Now, as Board President, that is one of his primary responsibilities.

"CRC's mission is important to me because water is a critical resource that is under extreme pressure from human development," he says. "We are making a difference by cleaning up our streams and planting trees to protect them."

Ted brings to CRC more than 30 years of experience in sales and marketing in the energy, telecommunication and insurance industries. In addition to leading CRC's Board, he serves on the Willistown Township Open Space Review Board and is a director of Haverford Trust Company. Ted received a B.S. in Economics from Union College and an M.B.A. from the Wharton School.

In his free time, Ted can often be found walking his Bernese Mountain dog Eloise or looking after the Belted Galloways he and his wife raise on their farm. "I love fly fishing, hiking, biking and skiing," he says. "It's hard to find an outdoor activity I don't enjoy."
